

THE FLYER

Vol. 34, Issue 16

Salisbury University's Student Voice

February 27, 2007

No suspect named in sports bar shooting

By Matthew Rains
Staff Writer

Salisbury police still do not have a suspect after a parking lot shooting at a local sports bar left a man critically injured last week.

Devon Morgan, 27, of Salisbury was taken to Peninsula Regional Medical Center early Wednesday morning after a single shot from an unidentified gunman struck him in the head outside of Mulligan's Pub on Route 13.

The incident began inside the restaurant when approximately 10 individuals congregated in the men's bathroom where management believes the gun may have been handed off to the shooter.

"We had noticed a group of males enter the men's room with a lookout man guarding the door," said management. "At that point we moved our security to that side of the restaurant to disperse the gathering. The men exited the bathroom without a problem and we thought everything was cool."

At approximately 12:20 a.m., an unidentified man, believed to be the shooter, spilled his drink on Morgan in an attempt to lure him outside. Morgan followed the man out the door and into the parking lot at which point the assailant revealed a handgun. Morgan then attempted to run east down the sidewalk before a single shot struck him on the left side of his head.

After the shot was fired Morgan re-entered the bar bleeding profusely and holding his head before slumping into a corner booth. Morgan's bloodied baseball cap could be seen on the floor with an entry and exit hole through its side. "It was absolutely crazy," said an unidentified witness and Salisbury University student. "We all heard this loud crack and everyone ducked down, girls were screaming, people were running for the door, it was like we were in a movie or something."

Management believed the incident occurred as the result of a prior altercation between the two individuals. Due to an increased amount of violence, Mulligan's had discontinued their Karaoke which normally packs the bar on Tuesday nights; however only about 50 patrons were in the bar at the time of the incident.

"We had been getting a bad crowd up here recently," said the management. "There have been a lot of fights, particularly on Tuesday's, and we're trying to discourage that." Mulligan's has also raised their weekend cover charge for anyone not in possession of a Salisbury student ID in an attempt to weed out potentially problematic individuals.

According to Lt. Rantz of the Salisbury Police department, Morgan was released from PRMC with minor head injuries but was not willing to speak with detectives about who or what he saw Tuesday night. Police have made no arrests and still have no witnesses who could identify the shooter. Anyone with information should contact Detective Barnes with the Salisbury police department at 410-548-3165.

Sarah Wright photo

The 16-member cast of the Vagina Monologues performed over the weekend and raised approximately $3,500 for the Life Crisis Center of Salisbury. Emily Jablonski is pictured above reciting her monologue, "The Woman Who Loved to Make Vaginas Happy."

Vagina Warriors prevail

By Byron Hurd
Staff Writer

Salisbury University hosted its fifth annual presentation of the Vagina Monologues this past weekend.

The 16-member cast stood before a packed Wicomico Room Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights and recited monologues based on interviews with hundreds of women. The stories ranged from light-hearted anecdotes about young love to chronicles of women in war and poverty-torn parts of the globe.

The monologues are part of a global movement known as V-Day. The "V" stands for Victory, Valentine and Vagina. This presentation of the Monologues is one of 1,150 V-Day campaigns conducted worldwide.

The theme of this year's V-Day campaign is 'Reclaiming Peace.' Campaigners seek to make the connection between the worldwide anti-violence work of V-Day activists and the collective desire for peace and an end to armed conflicts.

"We are saying that if a government supports the use of force, weapons and violence as a method of control and dominance, this models and gives license to the same kind of behavior at home," said V-Day Founder and Artistic Director Eve Ensler.

Cast member and advisor Dr. Chrys Egan was named SU's Vagina Warrior for 2007. Egan has been with the Vagina Monologues since it was first presented at SU, citing the V-Day cause as her motivation for returning each year.

Egan presented the last of the 21 monologues, titled "What Happened to Peace?" Playwright Eve Ensler crafted this piece as a new addition for 2007. It focuses on women in conflict zones in an effort to raise awareness of the sexual crimes that surround armed conflict, with special emphasis placed on Sudan, the Congo and Iraq.

Sarah Wells's "My Angry Vagina" drew a lively response from the crowd. Her presentation described the plight of the modern vagina, detailing the unpleasant treatment it receives in a world obsessed with cleanliness and sterility.

But the crowd favorite was Emily Jablonski's performance of "The Woman Who Loved to make Vaginas Happy." Jablonski took the role of a female sex therapist who helped women find their 'moan,' replicating each of the orgasmic outcries that she had encountered along the way. Jablonski performed "My Angry Vagina" in high school and decided to tackle the on-stage orgasm this year, her second with the program at SU.

"A Not So Happy Fact," performed by Alicia Canzane, and "My Vagina Was My Village," performed by Lauren Fuchs and Sarah

Wells, drew a solemn silence from the audience. "A Not so Happy Fact" detailed the prevalence of female genital mutilation throughout the world, and "My Vagina Was my Village" told the story of a woman who was brutally raped by soldiers when her village was occupied during a conflict.

The monologues raised approximately $3,500 for the Salisbury Life Crisis Center, whose mission is to support a safe and healthy community by serving children, adults and families through crisis intervention, advocacy and counseling for victims of child abuse, domestic violence and sexual assault, batterers counseling and safe housing for victims of domestic violence.

March is Women's History Month, and throughout there will be workshops and a lecture from Sarah Weddington, the famous Roe v. Wade lawyer.

University enrollment reaches an all-time high

By Corey Meissner
Staff Writer

Enrollment at Salisbury University is at an all-time high. More and more students are applying to SU, and many of them are being accepted.

This year, an additional 300 students were admitted, causing the total undergraduate population to grow to about 7,300 students. Janet Dudley-Eshbach, President of SU, commented on the university's burgeoning population in the Feb. 19 edition of The Baltimore Examiner.

"The big news," Dudley-Eshbach said, "is this institution is very much on the boom. Salisbury is in great demand."

The increase in interest in Salisbury could not have come at a more fitting time, as Salisbury has been designated one of the University System of Maryland's two "growth schools." This means that the student body will increase even more in the coming years.

According to September's Institute Performance Accountability Report, prepared by the Office of University Analysis, SU "resurrected its 2003 enrollment plan that charted a course to grow by 2,000 students over the next decade."

Though SU will be accepting more students each year, the quality of the student population will not suffer. "We've become more selective, despite our growth," Dudley-Eshbach promised. Since Salisbury has received more applications than in previous years, they can accept more students without compromising the school's current admissions statistics for incoming students.

SU administrators will be working to ensure that the current student-faculty ratio of one teacher for every seventeen students does not change. "It does mean hiring more faculty," Dudley-Eshbach said.

As the student body of SU grows, so does its campus. "The face of the campus is changing rather dramatically," Dudley-Eshbach said. The new TETC building currently being constructed is only the first step in refurbishing the campus. "The very design of the building, and the sophistication of its learning resources, will help us successfully recruit more of Maryland's best and brightest students," declared Dudley-Eshbach in her 2006 State of the University address. After the TETC is completed, construction will begin on the new home for the Perdue School of Business.

In Dudley-Eshbach's 2006 State of the University address, plans were announced to build a new campus library. "Without a high-quality library," Dudley-Eshbach said, "this University cannot sustain

Continued on page 2;
See ENROLLMENT

Jazz pianist graces Holloway

By Matt Harhai
Staff Writer

Chris Jarrett, jazz pianist virtuoso, performed in Holloway Hall as part of the Patricia White Wroten Piano Concert Series last Friday.

While performing, the spontaneity he incorporated into his own compositions demonstrated the extent of his musical prowess. Dr. Tabor, Professor of Music, explained that most of what he played was improvised.

The first and second set drew from classical, as well as experimental jazz. Jarrett has a way with the audience, they are "immediately taken in by his virtuosity" according to the Journal de Fanche-Comte. This became more and more evident throughout the performance beginning from the first song, which was slow, yet melodic. The audience was transfixed on every note that passed.

Although, in the next song, Jarrett completely smashed any notions of what the audience expected. His song "Guten Abend", German for "Good Evening," definitely set the mood for the rest of the night.

This song exposed Jarrett's signature sound, utilizing the lower keys to create chaos with his chords, and accentuating them with notes on the higher keys. Jarrett charmed the audience not only with his sounds, but he was gracious and modest, taking a bow after nearly each song.

In another highlight of the first set, a song called "Foam," Jarrett showed his quirky side. He took to standing and playing the keys with one hand while reaching down in the piano to fiddle with its insides, almost like a surgeon performing an operation. He then walked around almost childishly banging and tapping on the wood, the song ended abruptly with him closing the top of the piano, turning to the audience and saying, "That wood is hard," reversing disappointment into laughter.

Jarrett, who currently resides in Paris, was born in Pennsylvania in 1956. While going to Oberlin University and Indiana University, he studied piano and music history. An internationally known musician, he has composed ballets, film and chamber music since moving to Germany in the 1980s.

In the second shorter set, Jarrett did a number of quick improvisations, including more original compositions. The songs "Cats" and "Adrift" were played very fast, exhibiting more of his virtuosity. Jarrett exited the stage after playing a few more songs, and as the volume of the audience's claps seemed to trail off, Jarrett returned, "I don't want to be obnoxious" he said, provoking the crowd to clap again, showing their appreciation. Again his quiet, humble attitude charmed the audience. He played one more song and was met with a standing ovation at the end.

Chris Jarrett charmed the audience throughout his performance and received a standing ovation at the end.

Kurt Auer photo

Story Brief

Lacrosse defeats Christopher Newport

Torrential downpours, whipping wind and even a short rain delay couldn't stop the seventh-ranked Salisbury University Women's Lacrosse team (1-0) from defeating Christopher Newport University 19-5 Thursday afternoon.

It was obvious that hard work during pre-season paid off, as the Gulls scored the game's first seven goals, and were up 12-2 at the half. "We worked a little bit of everything [during pre-season], not spending too much time on one certain thing; just playing well as a team," said Coach Jim Nestor, who is in his sixth season leading the women's lacrosse team.

Index

News.....2

Editorial.....3

Life & Style.....6

Sports.....8

Salisbury police re-examine nonlethal weapons

By Sean Gossard
News Editor

According to a recent police report, the May 2006 shooting of SU student Justin Fisher, could have been avoided if the Anne Arundel Police Department had a better arsenal of non-lethal weapons.

The report showed that 15 minutes before the shooting an officer called and requested beanbag shot-guns to stop Fisher, however no special-operations officer with a beanbag shotgun was on duty.

This development has caused police departments to reexamine their nonlethal tools.

Currently the Salisbury University Police Department uses both pepper spray and the expandable baton as forms of nonlethal weapons and only special units in the Salisbury Police Department use beanbag shotguns.

One of the most important weapons, Lt. Jeff Webb stated, is "Verbal Judo." Police are trained to talk and work through the problems using questions and showing that they are there to help not to arrest. "Here, on a college campus this becomes incredibly helpful," said Webb.

Police use a chain of actions before using any kind of lethal force. "There is a force continuum," explained Lt. Mike Nicolas, "the more levels until lethal force is needed, the better."

For the past few months, the department has been looking into adding tasers to their belts. However, Sgt. Brian Waller, the SU Police Departments weapons trainer, said there were drawbacks.

"The taser can cause people to have heart problems, especially those on drugs or with some mental illness, the two kinds of people we need to use it on the most," said Waller.

The 55,000 volt prongs could also hit someone in their eye, in which case the officer would have to shock the person immediately before they tried pulling it out, which would cause more severe problems.

Annesty International and civil rights groups are against the use of tasers. According to a recent study, tasers are used on minorities nearly 200 percent more often than Caucasians.

Problems with nonlethal weapons have been happening all over the country. Two years ago a woman in Boston was killed by a pepper ball shot, leading to the banning of pepper ball guns from the Boston police force. Recently, a UCLA student leaving the library was tasered repeatedly by campus police after he was placed in cuffs.

"No matter what happens, we are always questioned or second guessed," said Nicolas. "We must make split-second decisions that are judged in full detail later."

ENROLLMENT
from page 1

Panel speaks on Darfur crisis

By Sean Gossard
News Editor

A panel discussion was held last Tuesday to talk about the ongoing conflict that is taking place in an area of eastern Africa known as Darfur.

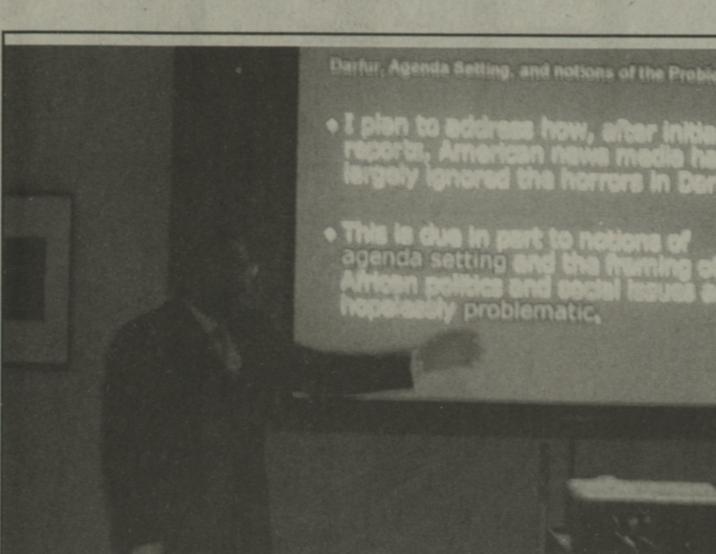

"In September of 2006, peace talks began with the help of New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson," stated Newton, but the media has given the topic very little coverage.

"The slaughtering in Darfur falls into both hard and soft news, and is considered very newsworthy by media standards," stated Newton.

He continued by explaining the reason that media does not want to cover Darfur is because it is a problematic area.

"Problems are being caused and solved in Africa all the time and people just don't want to see it anymore," he said. "Many believe the entire area is full of famine."

Newton offered some suggestions for progress. "There are lots of empowerment on blogs (web journals), websites and e-journals. Also, BBC effectively updates a

Kurt Auer photo

Dr. Darrell Newton showed a slideshow demonstrating reasons behind American media's lack of Darfur reporting.

Newton said the two problems with news coverage are agenda setting, in which news media influences what the people believe is important, and the idea that Africa is a problematic area.

Newton offered some suggestions for progress. "There are lots of empowerment on blogs (web journals), websites and e-journals. Also, BBC effectively updates a

Learn with SU reaches out to community

By Diana Westenberger
Staff Writer

"Learn with SU" kicked off its first classes for Delmarva residents 50 years and older last Tuesday. This is a pilot program initiated by SU President Dudley-Eshbach to gain presence in the local beach communities, where many retirees reside.

"Learning doesn't stop after high school or even after college. It lasts a lifetime." This is the philosophy SU is hoping to bring to the older, local generation through the programs provided. There are currently three classes at four different locations.

"It's nice that we can recognize our great faculty and alums as presenters," said Waters, "and they are willing to share their talent within the lifelong learning program."

Faculty and staff of SU are showing their support for "Learn with SU" by sharing their knowledge and expertise on an array of topics. Don Whaley, of the History department, and Dr. Dawn Chamberlin, the women's field hockey coach, are two of the first presenters.

"It's nice that we can recognize our great faculty and alums as presenters," said Waters, "and they are willing to share their talent within the lifelong learning program."

With the Darfur panel discussions, lectures, movies and open night last week, I hope the student body of Salisbury University finally understands or begins to reflect upon the magnitude of the cataclysmic situation that is ongoing in Africa. Some estimates calculate over 400,000 citizens of the Sudanese region, Darfur, have been killed since the beginning of the conflict in July of 2003.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.

These rebels hide and fight the government and the janjaweed within the civilian population, which leaves many innocent people dead in the process. The UN proposed a peacekeeping operation that was turned down by the

government of Sudan because leaders stated their sovereign immunity as a country would be breached. No matter who is at fault, the rebels or the government, one fact is certain, the UN needs to essentially impede this humanitarian crisis before it escalates any further.</p

And who isolated us?

"I'm concerned about protectionism, isolationism."

Those were the first words President Bush spoke as he sat down Wednesday at an editorial board meeting at The Wall Street Journal.

Reading his remarks calls forth only sadness. For neither the president nor his acolytes at the Journal appear to have learned anything from the disasters their ideas have visited upon the party and country.

Can Bush not see that the isolation of America is a result of the war he launched on a nation that, no matter how odious its regime, did not threaten us? Can he see clearly now the idiocy of the Journal's 10-year crusade for a "MacArthur Regency" in Baghdad? Has this president learned nothing? And, if not, what does that portend for Iran?

As for protectionism, does Bush not see the link between the rise of economic nationalism in America, the rout of his party in November and the humongous trade deficits he has been running up?

When the trade figures for 2006 come in, it will be revealed that the United States ran the greatest trade deficit in history, close to $800 billion, near 7 percent of GDP. And the greatest trade deficit with any one country will be recorded — a trade deficit with China of nearly $230 billion.

Because China fixes its currency 40 percent below where it would float in a free market, Beijing is siphoning factories, technologies and jobs out of our country at a prodigious rate. For two decades, China's annual growth has been consistent at 9-10 percent. Beijing has accumulated $1 trillion in hard currency reserves, most of it in dollar-denominated instruments.

A good slice of that trade surplus, and of the billions Beijing collects in annual interest on that share of our national debt it holds, is used to finance the greatest military buildup in Asia since Japan in the 1930s.

Our "strategic partner" just sent us a message in the clear. Using a land-based ballistic missile, Beijing blasted a satellite out of the sky, 500 miles above the earth.

Does President Bush not understand the correlation between his trade policy, our sinking dollar and the loss of 3 million manufacturing jobs on his watch? Economic patriotism is on the march because economic globalization is failing America.

We are being skinned alive by our trading partners. While we have eliminated tariffs, they impose value-added taxes of up to 20 percent on U.S. goods entering the country and rebate the VAT on goods they export to the United States. This system operates like a 40 percent tariff on U.S. goods. That is why we are running record trade deficits with Canada, the European Union, Japan and Free Asia.

Bush has now begun his campaign for renewal of "fast track" authority, which expires in July. Under fast track, Congress agrees to give up its constitutional right to amend trade treaties.

But to give Bush a blank check to negotiate trade treaties after his record trade deficits makes as much sense as giving him a blank check to launch another war. Some adult has got to grab the steering wheel here.

In closing, the president delivered a little disquisition on history to the editors. Reading it, one has the sinking feeling of that professor of Civil War history who, at semester's end, was asked by one of his students: "Sir, why were all the major Civil War battles fought in national parks?"

Said Bush: "Sometimes, nativism, isolationism and protectionism all run hand in hand. We've got to be careful about that in the United States. The 1920s was a period of high tariff, high tax, no immigration. And the lesson of the 20s ought to be a reminder of what is possible for future presidents."

What is President Bush talking about?

Under Harding-Coolidge and Treasury Secretary Andrew Mellon, tariffs were indeed doubled to 38 percent, but imports were only 4 percent of GDP and most imports came in free. And Wilson's wartime income tax rates were not raised, but slashed from Wilson's 72 percent to 25 percent.

When Harding took office, the unemployment rate was 12 percent. When Coolidge went home, it was 3 percent and America was producing 42 percent of the world's manufactures. Between 1922 and 1927, the economy grew at 7 percent a year, the largest peacetime growth ever. They were not called The Roaring Twenties for nothing, Mr. Bush.

As for "nativism," the immigration law of 1924 simply cut back immigration to 160,000 a year, and declared that the racial and ethnic profile of America was fine and should not be altered. Sam Gompers agreed. A. Philip Randolph wanted immigration stopped. Thanks to that law, by the 1950s, almost all immigrants and their children had been fully assimilated and Americanized. What was wrong with that, Mr. President? Or do you and your Journal acolytes simply not like the country you grew up in?

Ronald Reagan, who loved Coolidge, went to Eureka College. Bush, who thinks the Republican Era of the 1920s a disaster, was educated at Yale and Harvard. Maybe that's the problem.

PATRICK J. BUCHANAN

SGA brings you another: RENTER'S FAIR

► MARCH 7, 2007 ◄

in the
3-7PM Wicomico Room

WE CAN'T PAY THE RENT, [Your school, your SGA
BUT WE JUST MIGHT GET A ROOF OVER YOUR HEAD]

As for protectionism, does Bush not see the link between the rise of economic nationalism in America, the rout of his party in November and the humongous trade deficits he has been running up?

When the trade figures for 2006 come in, it will be revealed that the United States ran the greatest trade deficit in history, close to $800 billion, near 7 percent of GDP. And the greatest trade deficit with any one country will be recorded — a trade deficit with China of nearly $230 billion.

Because China fixes its currency 40 percent below where it would float in a free market, Beijing is siphoning factories, technologies and jobs out of our country at a prodigious rate. For two decades, China's annual growth has been consistent at 9-10 percent. Beijing has accumulated $1 trillion in hard currency reserves, most of it in dollar-denominated instruments.

A good slice of that trade surplus, and of the billions Beijing collects in annual interest on that share of our national debt it holds, is used to finance the greatest military buildup in Asia since Japan in the 1930s.

SALISBURY UNIVERSITY

Is Looking For The Next
PROVOST
&
V.P.

SALISBURY UNIVERSITY IS CONDUCTING A NATIONAL SEARCH TO SELECT A NEW PROVOST AND VICE PRESIDENT FOR ACADEMIC AFFAIRS AT THE UNIVERSITY. THE PROVOST IS THE CHIEF ACADEMIC OFFICER, SECOND IN COMMAND AFTER THE PRESIDENT. HE OR SHE PROVIDES IMPORTANT LEADERSHIP TO THE UNIVERSITY STUDENTS, FACULTY, AND STAFF. YOUR PARTICIPATION IN THE INTERVIEW PROCESS TO SELECT THE NEXT SU PROVOST IS IMPORTANT. PLEASE PLAN TO ATTEND AN OPEN SESSION FOR THE PROVOST CANDIDATES.

DURING THESE SESSIONS, THE CANDIDATE WILL GIVE A 15-MINUTE PRESENTATION ON THE FOLLOWING QUESTION: "WHAT ARE THE CHALLENGES FACED BY COMPREHENSIVE UNIVERSITIES IN THE UNITED STATES IN THE NEW MILLENNIUM AND HOW, AS PROVOST, WOULD YOU ADDRESS THOSE CHALLENGES?" AFTER THE PRESENTATION, THE CANDIDATE WILL HAVE TIME TO ANSWER QUESTIONS POSED BY CAMPUS CONSTITUENTS.

THE SCHEDULE FOLLOWS:

DR. C. REYNOLD VERETT
DEAN AND PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY AND
BIOCHEMISTRY- MISHER COLLEGE OF ARTS & SCIENCES
UNIVERSITY OF THE SCIENCE IN PHILADELPHIA
Monday, Feb. 26, 3:30pm-4:45pm Halloway Hall Auditorium
Tuesday, Feb. 27, 3:30pm-4:45pm Devilbiss Hall 123

DR. LINDA RAE MARKERT
DEAN, SCHOOL OF EDUCATION- STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, OSWEGO
Thursday, March 1, 3:30pm-4:45pm Devilbiss Hall 123
Friday, March 2, 3:30pm-4:45pm Devilbiss Hall 123

DR. THOMAS JONES
INTERIM PROVOST- SALISBURY UNIVERSITY
Monday, March 5, 3:30pm-4:45pm Halloway Hall Auditorium
Tuesday, March 6, 3:30pm-4:45pm Devilbiss Hall 123

DR. DAVID ESTES
SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT-
LOYOLA UNIVERSITY NEW ORLEANS
Thursday, March 8, 3:30pm-4:45pm Devilbiss Hall 123
Friday, March 9, 3:30pm-4:45pm Devilbiss Hall 123

One Medium One Topping Pizza $6.49

Coupon Required. Expires 2/29/07. Offer good for a limited time at participating Papa John's restaurants only. Add 10% toppings extra. Not valid with other coupons or discounts. Use one coupon per transaction. Taxes, gratuity and delivery extra. Papa John's is not responsible for all applicable taxes.

After 9pm Special
(9:00pm-11pm to Close Only)

DR. PAPA JOHN'S
Papa John's Famous Pizza

One Medium One Topping Pizza $6.49

Coupon Required. Expires 2/29/07. Offer good for a limited time at participating Papa John's restaurants only. Add 10% toppings extra. Not valid with other coupons or discounts. Use one coupon per transaction. Taxes, gratuity and delivery extra. Papa John's is not responsible for all applicable taxes.

Wings Special

Two Papa John's Wings (1/2 lb.) Buffalo Or Mild Chicken & BBQ & $12.99

Coupon Required. Expires 2/29/07. Offer good for a limited time at participating Papa John's restaurants only. Add 10% toppings extra. Not valid with other coupons or discounts. Use one coupon per transaction. Taxes, gratuity and delivery extra. Papa John's is not responsible for all applicable taxes.

Study Break Special

One Medium Two Toppings & Two 20 oz. Bottles of a Coke® Product $8.99

Coupon Required. Expires 2/29/07. Offer good for a limited time at participating Papa John's restaurants only. Add 10% toppings extra. Not valid with other coupons or discounts. Use one coupon per transaction. Taxes, gratuity and delivery extra. Papa John's is not responsible for all applicable taxes.

Original or thin crust are available.

Mr. Advice

Mr. Advice answers all your questions, even private ones, in complete confidentiality. Send your questions to: kb04128@students.salisbury.edu

Don't be shy, ask anything!

I dated this chick in high school for a year or so and we both graduated, but she moved away and didn't want to make it work. "It would be too hard for us unless we moved in and went to the same school," was the classic line she gave, I followed by, "I want to try new things." It's been a couple years now and come to find out she transferred to a school not too far from mine. Now that she's closer, she wants me back although I've refused to meet up with her. I don't have any bad memories and I'm curious about her. She still holds a spot in my heart. Should I give this another chance?

Well, that all depends. After gathering information about a situation like this, I found that some would give her another chance and some say only one chance. I'll lay down the basic but, in the end, it is ultimately you who has to make that decision. And yes, you can ask others about their opinions but do not let it be the final rule because then they are the ones making decisions for you. When it comes to the relationship, you have to realize that you two were in high school; therefore, her ending it, may be an indication that she was just thinking about what would be best since you would both be attending different colleges. She's young, you're young, and it may have been the best decision, especially since you guys didn't break up on bad terms. It's possible that she was keeping in mind that maybe she could date you later in life after she's grown up a bit. Who knows? But by not meeting up with her, you'll never know her intentions. There's nothing to lose, especially since you say "she still holds a spot in my heart." Now, for those who would have said, "Only one chance," that's just part of an opinion. They might say, "There are too many options out there for you to consider going back." It all depends on how you view situations in life. You could have said that line and see what other options you have or you could it a chance to see what brought her back to you. My outlook on it is that if you haven't had serious problems with her (mostly fond memories, great relationship with the parents, enjoyed her company, etc.) I don't see why it is harmful to give her another chance. Now, that's under the assumption that you're still interested in her and she genuinely interested in you. Just remember, you have to be the one to make the decision because you are an adult now.

Advice of the week:

When the going gets tough, the tough go home? Well, a lot of times as a college student's stress can build up easily and because you're on campus (or off campus) you may not be able to get away from it all. Sometimes going home for the weekend isn't a bad thing because you can recuperate, talk with the family and old friends, and sleep in your own bed! Surprisingly enough, parties may not cut it all the time for stress relieving and it's alright to take the weekend off. Occasionally, it can also be a place to get work done without distraction. Just remember, when you're pulling your hair out during the end of exam week or finals week; that maybe a home-cooked meal doesn't seem so bad.

SHUTTLE & LIMO

JACK FROST SKI TRIP
MARCH 3RD

SPRING BREAK TRIP TO MIAMI

GREAT SLATES TRANSPORTATION

NASCAR RACE TRIPS

FOR MORE INFO CALL 410-221-8833

Salmonella outbreak sparks recalls

By Laura Emmons
Staff Writer

The nationwide salmonella outbreak that affected over 300 people in 39 states has been linked to two brands of peanut butter, according to reports by the Food and Drug Administration. Tests indicate that Peter Pan and select jars of Great Value brand peanut butter are responsible for many food-borne illnesses reported since August 2006. Since the discovery, both brands have issued a recall of the affected products.

According to officials, all Peter Pan peanut butter, including the 3/4 ounce and 1/2 ounce single serving packs, and all jars of Great Value brand peanut butter bearing a product code that begins "2111" are potentially contaminated with the outbreak strain identified as Salmonella Tennessee, an organism which can cause serious and sometimes fatal infections in young children, frail or elderly people, and others with weakened immune systems.

It is unclear how the peanut butter was tainted. During the manufacturing process, peanuts are usually heated to temperatures high enough to kill germs. Government and industry officials believe the contamination may have been caused by dirty equipment. Production has been halted in ConAgra's Sylvester, Georgia plant, where the peanut butter was manufactured, until the exact cause can be identified and eliminated.

Despite the alarm triggered by this particular incidence, recalled food products aren't uncommon. The FDA and the Center for Disease Control work together to monitor and prevent outbreaks with dangerous microorganisms such as Salmonella, E. coli O157:H7 and Listeria monocyt-genes. Recalled food products that pose a significant health risk are categorized according to the threat level. According to the FDA, Class I recall is one in which the use of, or exposure to, the given product may cause serious adverse health consequences or death. There were over 100 Class I recalls involving food products in 2006. Many of these were due to undeclared allergens in the foods, but some were caused by dangerous food poisoning.

Salmonella may cause fever, diarrhea, and abdominal cramps. In rare cases, it can enter the bloodstream and cause life-threatening infections. No deaths have been linked to this outbreak. Those who have eaten the affected products and experienced any of these symptoms are advised to seek medical attention and report the illness to state or local health authorities. Everyone that has purchased the contaminated peanut butter should discard it immediately to prevent infection.

For more information on recalled food products, visit: <http://www.fda.gov/opacom7/alerts.html>

Part one: Using the internet to make life easier

By Hianna Adrian
Staff Writer

Who doesn't want a better world? Think of all the problems in the world, in your city or town or on your own block: pollution, children who do not have any kind of support, violence, the homeless... If only somebody would do something about these things. Why not you?

This may seem like a far-fetched idea, but every idea has a humble beginning. If you feel truly inspired, you will pay attention to the first part of the three-feature series about websites that can make your life easier and better, and learn about websites that can make your goal of helping the world a whole lot easier.

Whether you are interested in feeding the hungry, protecting the environment, or making your voice heard by the troops in Iraq, you will find the means to get started in this article.

■ <http://www.care2.com> - Care2 makes the world green!

With 6,382,838 members, Care2.com is the Web's largest environmental community and offers outstanding web services that customers use daily. By donating 10% of its revenues to environmental causes, Care2.com adds a unique green twist that helps its users make a strong financial commitment to the environment.

By simply using Care2.com's free e-card, email, news, search, shopping, a-mail, news, relation, shopping, Care2.com users generate donations (derived from advertising revenues) to non-profit environmental organizations. Moreover, Care2.com brings education about the environment to its users with info blocks, video, articles, or discussion forums hosted by environmentalists that change every day.

■ <http://www.thehungersite.com>

You know the facts?

It is estimated that one billion people in the world suffer from hunger and malnutrition. About 24,000 people die every day from hunger or hunger-related causes. Three-fourths of these deaths are children under the age of five. Famine and wars cause about 10% of hunger deaths, although these tend to be the ones you hear about most often. The majority of hunger deaths are caused by chronic malnutrition. Families facing extreme poverty are simply unable to get enough food to eat.

In 1999, a year marked by good economic news, 31 million Americans were "food insecure," meaning that they were either hungry or unsure of where their next meal would come from. Of these Americans, 12 million were children.

In conjunction with LetsSayThanks.com, Xerox is also sponsoring Give2TheTroops, a non-profit organization formed to support the physical, moral, and spiritual health of America's armed forces in combat zones around the world through the letters and packages prepared and shipped by volunteers.

Postcards personalized using LetsSayThanks.com will be printed in batches on an ongoing basis, then bundled and sent along with care packages from Give2TheTroops. Feel free to visit LetsSayThanks.com often and send as many cards as you wish.

This website advocates that every click counts in the life of a hungry person, and by clicking every day, users give help and hope to those with nowhere to turn.

■ <http://www.letsaythanks.com> In support of our troops

To honor U.S. military personnel and increase community morale, Xerox Corporation has created Let's Say Thanks, a national program designed to deliver millions of cards to service men and women overseas with messages of support from home. Postcards sent through

Postcards are simply unable to get

How does the team look this year? We look very good this year. We have a lot to prove because we had a winning streak of 69 games in a row. We have to come out and win the championship this year and I think we expect nothing less than that. We need to go undefeated and start the streak up again.

What do you like to do in your free time?

When it's nice out my friends

Volume 34 Issue 16

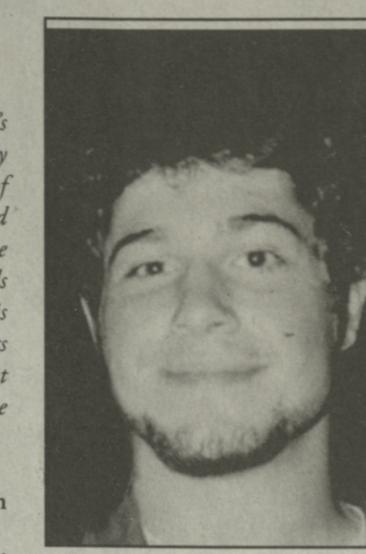

SPORTS

February 27, 2007

Student Athlete Spotlight

Bishop strives for success

By Joe Slaninka
Staff Writer

Senior attacker on the SU Men's Lacrosse team, Eric Bishop already has 6 goals in the first three games of the season and he is looking forward to success on and off the field. The Media, Pennsylvania native hails from Penncrest High School and is majoring in Communication Arts and minoring in History. I caught up with him the morning of the team's home game against Catholic.

What is the basic game plan against Catholic later today?

Basically we want to go out and execute our game plan. They may be playing a zone so we want to go out and attack the zone and exploit their weaknesses.

Do you have any pre-game rituals?

Yeah many, many pre-game rituals. I don't know where to start. I always drink two Red Bulls before every game and I listen to the same music before every game as well.

What are your career goals after graduation?

I like to write and I'm a huge sports fan so I would like to become a sports writer one day. That's my dream job.

If you could sum up your lacrosse experience at SU in one sentence what would you say?

It's been the best experience of my life and I'm definitely going to miss it when I'm gone.

What do you like to do in your free time?

When it's nice out my friends

Gulls score 42 goals in first two home games

By Shawn Nisson
Sports Editor

The top-ranked Salisbury University men's lacrosse team made it look easy in their first two home games of the season, pummeling Capital Athletic Conference foes Marymount University and Catholic University, 23-3 and 24-2 respectively. Salisbury is now 79-0 all-time in CAC competition since joining the conference in 1995. The Gulls have also won 51 straight games at home and are riding a 49-game regular season win streak. The Gulls are now 3-0 on the season, two of which are conference wins, and have already outscored their opponents 61-10.

On Wednesday the Gulls came out flying, leading 7-1 after the first quarter, with junior attackman Matt Hickman scoring two of his game-high four goals in the first stanza. Greg Titus, another junior attackman, matched Hickman posting four goals of his own in the game. While 11 Gulls recorded assists, Salisbury cashed in on five of six extra-man opportunities, and out shot the Cardinals 66-7.

Salisbury will faceoff with Goucher College tomorrow at home in a CAC match-up.

test before Catholic finally got on the board with 3:44 remaining in the half to pull within 13. The Gulls added eight unanswered goals in the third quarter to extend their advantage to 21-1.

On Friday the Gulls took out Catholic University 24-2, in front of 225 freezing fans. Hickman showed his scoring prowess once more, tallying five goals to go along with an assist. The first line of attackman, comprised of Eric Bishop (three goals), Titus (three goals and two assists), and Hickman combined for 11 Salisbury markers. Salisbury cashed in on five of six extra-man opportunities, and out shot the Cardinals 66-7.

Salisbury will faceoff with Goucher College tomorrow at home in a CAC match-up.

Mills hits 1,000 as Catholic heads home

By Megan Armor
Staff Writer

Senior Jessica Mills reached a milestone last Tuesday night, scoring her 1,000th career point in the Gulls' 75-69 first round CAC tournament victory over Catholic. The opening match in Capital Athletic Conference tournament play pitted fourth seed Salisbury (15-10, 8-6 CAC) against fifth seed Catholic (15-11, 7-7 CAC) for the third time this season.

With home court advantage, the Salisbury women came out on fire against Catholic; outscoring the Cardinals 21-5 in the first seven minutes of play. Mills, who scored a game-high 22 points and grabbed nine rebounds, opened the first half by sinking two free throws. "I scored 22, but we had several other players scoring in double figures that stepped up as well," Mills said. Catholic's Maria Rojas answered with a lay-up and the Cardinals cut the lead to 16 to 12 with 8:12 left on the clock. "They got a little jumpy but mostly stopped getting in a position to get shots off versus their zone," head Coach Bridget Benshelter said.

After Catholic tied the game for a second time at 60 apiece, Jessica Mills stepped to the free throw line and sunk both of her shots to give Salisbury a two point lead in the process, recorded her 1,000th career point. "Scoring 1,000 points was a goal that I set for myself at the beginning of the summer, so it was nice to be able to achieve that," Mills said.

Catholic would take their first lead at 63-62 with 5:36 remaining on the clock, however it was Mills who stepped up with 10 points for nearly the entire first ten minutes of the game with great defense and rebounding. Mills then forced the issue for the Gulls. After creating a turnover on the defensive end, the senior came down the court and calmly drained a three.

Phillips started the second half off right for Salisbury, nailing a three pointer to christen the new half.

Catholic's Justine Gray answered with a Cardinal three-pointer, making it 48-32. Catholic began to inch closer to Salisbury, cutting the Gulls lead all the way down from 16 to two with 8:12 left on the clock. "They got a little jumpy but mostly stopped getting in a position to get shots off versus their zone," head Coach Bridget Benshelter said.

After Catholic tied the game for a second time at 60 apiece, Jessica Mills stepped to the free throw line and sunk both of her shots to give Salisbury a two point lead in the process, recorded her 1,000th career point.

"Scoring 1,000 points was a goal that I set for myself at the beginning of the summer, so it was nice to be able to achieve that," Mills said.

Catholic would take their first lead at 63-62 with 5:36 remaining on the clock, however it was short-lived as the Gulls Megan Klug had a lay-up to reclaim the lead as the Gulls sped away from Catholic in the final minutes.

The Sea Gulls defense proved to be too strong for the Cardinals, as Phillips ended the game at the free throw line, 75-69.

Salisbury capitalized on Catholic's foul and shot 81 percent at the free throw line, scoring 17 points. "Meghan Phillips came up big by going four for four, making all her free throws for the game winner," Benshelter said. "Also stepping up with perfection on the free throw line was

Don't let your health concerns become health problems.

We can help you today.

- No appointment necessary
- Open 7 days-a-week
- Evening hours

Confidential & Convenient Medical Care

Monday- Saturday
9 AM to 7 PM

Sunday
9 AM to 5 PM

Coughs/colds/sore throat	Cuts/lacerations
Bronchitis	STDs/HIV testing
Nausea/vomiting	Plan B
Ear aches	GYN concerns
Fever/flu	Pregnancy tests
Asthma/allergies	Infections
	Meningitis vaccine

SALISBURY Immediate Care & Injury Center

www.sbyimmediatecare.com 410-543-2020

659 S. Salisbury Blvd., Suite 2
Located in the Salisbury Health Pavilion.
across the street from Wawa on the south side of Salisbury

Steve Wackett photos

Left: Katie Simmons is crowded by a defender as she runs downfield. Center: Robyn Bishop looks for a pass from a teammate in Thursday's game. Right: Jessica Liston makes a quick direction change as she maneuvers around an opponent.

Women's LAX takes out Christopher Newport

By Merideth Marr
Staff Writer

Torrential downpours, whipping wind and even a short rain delay couldn't stop the seventh-ranked Salisbury University Women's Lacrosse team (1-0) from defeating Christopher Newport University 19-5 Thursday afternoon.

It was obvious that hard work during preseason paid off, as the

"I think it was a pretty well-distributed performance."

Jim Nestor
Women's Lacrosse Coach

Gulls scored the game's first seven goals, and were up 12-2 at the half. "We worked a little bit of everything [during preseason], not spending too much time on one certain thing; just playing well as a team," said Coach Jim Nestor, who is in his sixth season leading the women's lacrosse team.

Junior Sue Ackermann took charge offensively, netting seven assists and a single goal, for a career high of eight points. Nestor credits the win to a collective effort by the Gulls. "I think it was a pretty well distributed performance," said Nestor. "Our midfield players did a great job causing turn-overs to get the ball back on offense. I think we [also] played pretty well defensively as a group."

Sophomore Robyn Bishop led the team in most goals with four, while seniors Stephanie Shores, Katie Simmons and Ani Khatchatoorian scored three each. Freshman goalie Erin Will had three saves during her 45 minutes of play, nabbing the win in her first collegiate start.

Nestor predicts big wins for the Gulls this season. "I hope we can repeat as conference champions and do well in the NCAA tournament," he said. Last season, Salisbury defeated Mary Washington 9-6 for the conference win, but fell short 6-5 to The College of New Jersey in the NCAA Division III Women's Lacrosse Regional Championship game.

The Gulls next home game is against Virginia Wesleyan on Wednesday at 3 p.m.

Go Gulls

SPORTS BEAT ★ SPORTS BEAT

BASEBALL

SU's head coach Doug Fleetwood earned his 200th career win with the Gulls, as Salisbury dispatched Christopher Newport University 5-2 on Tuesday afternoon. The 26th ranked Gulls (4-1) kicked off the scoring in the third inning, with senior third basemen Alex Vitale driving in two runs with an RBI double. In the sixth, back-to-back doubles from Brian Theibault and Brian Camper helped to bump the Gulls lead up to four. Christopher Newport (6-2) scored two runs in the bottom of the eighth one each from Trae Baily, and pinch-hitter Parker Neal. But it wasn't enough as Salisbury starter Dan Oleynik (1-0) pitched six innings, allowing three hits while striking out six CNU batters to record his first win of the season.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

The men's basketball team had their season ended on Tuesday night, losing to Catholic 79-59 in the first round of the Capital Athletic Conference tournament. It is the fourth straight year that the Cardinals have brought an end to SU's season; last season the Gulls fell 79-70 in the conference championship game. The first half was back and forth with four ties and seven lead changes. Catholic (20-5) went on a 15-6 run to end the first half, taking a ten point lead into the break. The Gulls (12-14) pulled within seven in the second half after Catholic's lead had reached 14, but that's as close as SU would get. Catholic went on a 20-9 run to pull away and cruise to the 20-point vic-

Dolphins defeated in doubleheader

By Brett Dickinson
Staff Writer

Salisbury baseball swept visiting Staten Island in a double-header on Saturday, doing so in a convincing manner. The first of the two games led to a shut out victory for the Gulls. Salisbury (7-1) wasted no time, basically securing the win in the first inning, totaling 11 runs, most coming with only one out. The second game finished with another victory, ending in a final of 13-2.

After an uneventful top half to the first inning, Salisbury started their turn at bat with four straight walks, loading the bases and bringing in a run without a single hit. Freshman first basemen Mike Celenza started the attack with a single, driving in two runs for the Gulls. Another single brought in two more scores to give Salisbury a 5-0 lead with no outs. The strong start forced Staten Island to make a pitching change, removing right-hander Andrew DePaulo after he gave up four hits to go along with an error. Fifteen batters came to the plate, as the Gulls lead eventually reached 11 before the first innings was over. Salisbury tacked on five more runs by the end of the game. SU Freshman Mike Celenza went 4-4 with a game high four RBIs and two runs scored.

The back half of the double-header started off where the first game finished. Salisbury scored early jumping out to a 3-0 lead by the end of the first inning. Staten Island's only runs came in the third inning, with a single by Thomas DeWaters driving in one and an error bringing in Rudy Piccirillo. Senior Andrew Jenson led Salisbury with two hits, three RBIs and one stolen base in the second game of the double header. The Sea Gulls continually pounded the Dolphins, as they added runs throughout the game to finish with a 13-2 win.

Junior Infielder Mark Bostwick looks for a big hit while at bat against Staten Island during Saturday's game.

Salisbury's offense dominated the Dolphins compiling 22 hits and 29 runs in the doubleheader.

Salisbury extended their win streak to seven, with three total wins between Friday and Saturday. It's been an impressive stretch for the Gulls, including a 7-0 no-hitter against Eastern on Friday. Their game on Sunday versus Shenandoah was postponed due to weather, so Salisbury's next game is March 1 at Washington College.

Senior Dan Oleynik pitches a great game against Staten Island.

SALISBURY SPORTS CALENDAR

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday	Sunday
		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ■ 3 p.m. - Women's Lacrosse vs. Wesleyan ■ 3:30 p.m. - Men's Lacrosse vs. Goucher College 			<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ■ 11 a.m. - Men and Women's Tennis vs. Virginia Wesleyan ■ Outdoor Track and Field Salisbury University Opener ■ 1 p.m. - Baseball vs. Montclair ■ 1 p.m. - Women's Lacrosse vs. York ■ 3:30 a.m. - Men's Tennis vs. Chowan ■ 3:30 a.m. - Women's Tennis vs. New York 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ■ 12 p.m. - Softball vs. Lynchburg ■ 1 p.m. - Baseball vs. Montclair ■ 1 p.m. - Men's Lacrosse vs. Roanoke ■ 2 p.m. - Men's Tennis vs. Piedmont ■ 2 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. Washington